Reporting Engagements

Reporting engagements entail a broad range of services in which some level of assurance is generally expressed (through the issuance of a report) on a document or an assertion made by your organization's management. The level of assurance expressed, if any, depends on the nature of the engagement. Assurance levels can range from expression of an opinion (as in an audit) to no assurance (as in a compilation). Limited assurance, negative assurance, and agreed-upon procedures are other forms of assurance that can be expressed. The end product of a reporting engagement is a written report issued by AHP.

Accounting Assistance Engagements

Depending on the nature of the engagement, these services could be performed in conjunction with a reporting engagement or as a stand-alone service. In an accounting assistance engagement, we assist you with accounting procedures that are typically associated with an entity's normal accounting function. These services can include procedures or tasks required to record, value, or summarize accounting balances and transactions and the presentation of this information in financial statement form.
